

Tales of the Green Queen™

and her pursuit of sustainable living

by Susan Singer and Doreen Randall

While you're dreaming about loft apartments in Greenwich Village you should think about One Jackson Square.

What's that?

We're hosting NYC's 1st Residential Sustainability Seminar there next week, with experts teaching people about things like weatherization and green roofs..

You talked about weatherization with the President. Is that to change the climate?

No, silly, it's to stop Climate Change. It basically means 'keeping the outside weather out and the inside weather in'. You can do this by sealing up leaks around windows and doors and insulating attics and roofs.

Oh, is that what a Green Roof is?

A Green Roof is actually planted, sometimes with just grass or with small plants, even trees. It insulates and can also capture and re-use water.

It sounds like I can learn a lot from this seminar about greening New York City Real Estate ...and much faster than reading a book.

Seminar 10/14/09 6:30 - 8:30 RSVP sin@corcoran.com for details.
